As the project manager, the following needs to be done for communications management in the recruitment process:

a. Plan Communications Management: This will involve underlining the requirements of the personnel based on the requirements of the stakeholders and the assets of the company (Mephyans-Robinson, 2010).

- Reason- This will help in a clear recruitment policy underlining specific requirements from the people to be recruited

b. Manage Communications: Now the project information will be collated, distributed and finally disposed to team members.

- Reason- To make each team member know his duties well during the recruitment process.

c. Control Communications: Throughout the recruitment process communication has to be regulated and monitored.

- Reason- To meet the information requirements of the stakeholders.

The entire process will entail a thorough determination of the communication requirements of the stakeholders, distribution of information, reporting of performance and finally the administrative closure (Mephyans-Robinson, 2010).
