Answer:

From work experience and as long as I work for Amazon I would chose Jeff Bezos the Co-Founder and CEO of Amazon as an example for my answer.

Who doesn't know Jeff Bezos the founder of the internet era giant Amazon. Bezos, always been known as one of the most innovative leaders in world. And if we take a look into the start of amazon and where amazon is now after 26 years we will immediately address Bezos as a Transformational Leader, Bezos always was looking to be surrounded by very smart people who can deliver an extraordinary result of his vision. From Online bookseller to be the biggest online retailer in the world Bezos lead the company by his vision to go the extra miles with very faithful vision and leadership skills very effectively and succeed in achieving his goal

Bezos, as mentioned he's a transformational, charismatic and a man of vision. From Day One Bezos inspired his team by his vision to startup the business, Jeff hired the best team to bring all his idea to become real, he insisted on the high standards and assured to deliver the best customer experience and that's why people believe in amazon as well. The inspiration of Bezos helped the team to grow and move to work in different sectors, he never missed a chance to promote himself and never miss the chance to grow up the business, and as always Bezos said it's still day one the motivation behind this clever statement makes everyone working with Bezos delivering the best result putting a 100% of efforts on daily basis to make the history.

On the other side of this leadership motivation high standards and hard work, the appreciations and the opportunities to grow within the team is incredible.

Last, from own opinion a great leader is mix of multiple leadership style so he can be able to adapt will kind of personalities in the workplace but mostly I go for the democratic leadership style where I give each team member his own space to do his work in his own way and invent and deliver new thing before it got reviewed and finalized. I found this style giving me the abilities to deliver the result I want within the org and all respective departments to work as one team seeking for the success. In terms
