(Discuss the retaliation ship between Functions of Management and function of project)

(ناقش العلاقة بين وظائف الادارة ووظائف المشروع)

The functional management is managing the routing activities in the organization such as planning, organizing, leading and controlling. Functional managers have repetitive process and tasks. The main mission of functional managers is to make sure that the daily business activities are done smoothly.

While project management is the process of producing or initiating, marketing, human resourcing, finance and closing the work of a project to achieve a pre-determined objective in specific time then move on to another project. project management is one time activity with specific time period.

The difference between project management and functional management could be identified by characteristics of a project. If the main goal is to accomplish a specific objective within a specific period of time and that is not routine duties, such a task relates to project management. While managing daily business routine tasks within the company is referred to functional management.
