Functions of Management

Management in some form or another is an integral part of living and is essential wherever human efforts are to be undertaken to achieve desired objectives. The basic ingredients of management are always at play, whether we manage our lives or business.

“Management is a set of principles relating to the functions of planning, organizing, directing, and controlling, and the applications of these principles in harnessing physical, financial, human, and informational resources efficiently and effectively to achieve organizational goals”.

function of project

A project is a temporary organization and therefore also needs its own project organization in which the structures, hierarchies and communication channels in the project are regulated. The boundaries between project and line must be clearly defined in order to be able to act efficiently both in the line and in the project. The number of projects and the number of employees involved in projects is constantly growing. A scarcity of resources is a well-known accompaniment to project work, since line activities must be handled in addition to projects. This makes it all the more important to clearly define the boundaries between line and project. The establishment of a project organization ensures the greatest possible transparency.
