All the best.

I choose Saudi ARAMCO to talk about some hazard its faces.

1- Worker injures:

It will effect on the employees also it will increase the insurance value of the company , and will effect on the company reputation.

It will be a hazard risk.

The likelihood of this risk is high, will impact on the person health and make less man power.

The strategy for the company to manage the risk, provide safety courses for the staff and provide personal protective equipment for them in addition there is yearly medical checkup for the employees to decide if they are fit to work.

2- Equipment damage:

It will effect on the production and there will be high cost to fix the equipment.

It is under hazard risk and the likelihood here is high, will lose the equipment and temporary stop for the production.

Company here follow these strategy:

Make a plan and procedure for program called prevent maintenance to check the equipment weekly and monthly, moreover there is policy for test & inspection so they plan for plant total shutdown and start inspect the equipment each three years as example. Also there are some safety equipment to protect the process equipment which will take any necessary action.

3_ entering the field of chemical:

ARAMCO operates in the oil business so there is no background to deal with chemical before the risk here will opportunity and high risk may it will lose the business.

They follow strategy here which was make contract with other company have experience in the chemical production like DOW & TOTAL and they start deal with them to exchange the experience and operate the plant.

4- Delay in the receipt of purchases:

It will effect on the operation and stop the production.

Type of risk is control risk and likelihood is high because production may stop.

The strategy they make here contracting with many resources and make huge storage for the material to avoid any shortage.
