GOOD LEADER

I am working as “Facility Engineer” in a well-known company name. I have a very good leadership situation. I am reporting direct to him. His position is called “Facility Manager”. He always shares with us his way of managing the company work and leading us to the right spot.

He is very smart and supportive person. He has wonderful traits that makes him a good leader to us. He is honest, confident, empathies and accountable man. He is a creative, inspire, and committed person. He has always a positive attitude and perfect communication among his staff and towards his bosses. He delegates the work tasks to his employees trusting and believing that they are able to handle the tasks given to them. Delegating to others shows that you have confidence in their abilities, and this can result in a positive morale in the workplace.

A good leader is generally focused and they are able to think rationally. Not only does a good leader view a situation as a whole, but is able to narrow down the cause as well as find the solution to the problem. Leaders should also be self-driven to work harder in wanting to achieve better results for the company. They are the driving force in the team and also someone the team could look up to and encourage the rest to work together. Great leaders know that when it comes to their company or workplace, they need to take personal responsibility for failure. A good leader does not make excuses; they take the blame regardless and then work out how to fix the problem as soon as possible. Responsibility is definitely a key leadership attribute.

Finally, these leadership qualities that every good leader should strive for including me, are; Honesty, Delegate, Communication, Confidence, Commitment, Positive attitude, Creativity, Inspire, Empathy, Accountability, Enthusiastic, Focus and drive, Responsible. These qualities and traits are the foundation of a good leadership. While some of these leadership qualities may be more naturally present in the personality of a leader, it is definitely something you can develop and strengthen over time.
