

Making a big change, developing others and being able to influence people and making success doesn't come without an art that called leadership. Looking at this modern century and the people surrounding us we encounter many leaders with different leadership styles. One of the leaders with her effective leading style that inspired a lot of people including me is Arianna Huffington, the women that was born in 1950, the one that we saw her name in the list of the world's 100 most influential people according to the time magazine.

Arianna Huffington is an author, a business women, CEO and the co-founder of the Huffington post. She is adopting the affiliative leadership style, she always see the success through her team that's why she put them first and join them in as part of the team, for instance she consider unusual metrics for the quality of her team, such as providing some nap rooms so her employees can rest when they are tired as she believes that success needs to be redefined. Arianna knows that success is hard without a cooperative stress free team, so she always look carefully into balancing her team's life by her support and morale care.

To sum up with this essay, Arianna is a great example as a hard working leader and I am personally adopting the same style that she has. In my workplace supervision area for example I see my colleague as a one family rather than just a team because I always put them first and I can see the harmony that they have and the productivity we create.
